Lyndon Group Grows Ethics & Compliance Practice
Brenda Schowalter joins the Newport Beach-based professional services firm

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. – Lyndon Group, an accounting, finance, IT and governance professional services firm, announces the addition of Brenda Schowalter to the firm’s ethics and compliance practice.

With more than 20 years of corporate governance, financial and operational experience, Schowalter will help Lyndon Group clients identify governance, risk and compliance gaps as well as implement best practices in ethics and compliance. Teaming up with the experienced professionals at Lyndon Group, Schowalter will assist companies with compliance risk assessments; code of ethics/conduct; whistleblower programs; employee hotlines/helplines; pre-employment screening programs; performance measurement; perception surveys as well as policies and procedures.

“Misrepresentation of financial condition, options backdating and misaligned executive compensation issues all have a common underlying root cause of inadequate corporate governance along with a lack of ethics and compliance tone at the top,” said Kenneth Jones, executive managing director of Lyndon Group. “With the addition of Brenda, Lyndon Group further deepens its expertise in helping clients create best-in-class governance, ethics and compliance practices.”
